A SAMPLER FROM THE FOUR SYSTEMS

The Starter Pack.

One thing from each of the four systems. The morning that starts every day. The five lifts I'd keep. The packing list I actually use. The first five tools to build with. Nothing theoretical. The real thing.

BY KEIT

EVOLVE BEYOND.

Why this exists.

You signed up for the newsletter. This is the thank you.

The four systems each cover one part of how I run my life. Discipline. Fitness. Travel. Income. Each one is a full manual. Each one took years to figure out and a long time to write down.

What you're holding is one piece from each. Not a teaser. Not a sales pitch. Four specific things you can use today. Read them, run them, see if any of them stick.

If they do, the full systems are at evlved.com. If they don't, no hard feelings. You got something useful and we both move on.

What's inside:

01 ·
DISCIPLINE My morning system. The first two hours of every day, in order.

02 ·
FITNESS The five lifts I'd keep if I could only do five.

03 ·
TRAVEL The carry-on packing list. After 22+ countries, the one I actually use.

04 ·
INCOME The starter stack. Five tools to start building something online from zero.

Run any one of them tomorrow. That's the whole point.

The morning system.

The first two hours of your day decide the next twenty-two. Build them once, build them right, and then never decide again.

I have run essentially the same morning for years. The routine works because it is simple enough to run on a low day, without negotiation. You do not need a perfect morning. You need one that does not require willpower to start.

THE MORNING STACK

00:00	Wake. Phone is allowed for work check only. No scrolling.
00:05	Shower. Brush teeth. Bathroom done.
00:20	Out the door. Walk thirty to ninety minutes.
DURING WALK	Coffee at some point, before or after, your call. Music, work calls, or thinking. Do not waste the walk on social media.
+90 MIN	Breakfast. Sit down. Eat real food.
~2 HR	Begin work.

The non-negotiable

The walk. If you do not have ninety minutes, do thirty. If you do not have thirty, do fifteen. The duration matters less than the fact that the walk happens. Sunlight, fresh air, motion. Every day.

The walk is the floor. Everything else is on top of it. If the day collapses, you still walked. That is the deal.

MY TAKE

Most people will not run this. Reading it feels like progress, so they stop there. Setting an alarm and walking tomorrow is not motivation. It is the first thing.

The five lifts I'd keep.

If I could only do five lifts for the rest of my life, these are the five. Not the most impressive. The ones that build the body I want with the least injury risk.

Push-pull-legs split, five sessions a week, forty-five minutes each. No heavy back squats, no deadlifts. The risk to my back and shoulders is too high for the reward, and I am building for life, not for a meet. One pick per category. The foundation of a complete training week.

THE LIFT	SETS × REPS	WHAT IT DOES
Dumbbell bench press (flat)	4 × 10	Main chest lift. Safer than barbell, better range of motion. Build a fuller, more visible chest line.
Reverse-grip lat pulldown	4 × 10	Main vertical pull. Hits the lats and biceps cleanly without grinding the shoulders.
Dumbbell shoulder press (seated)	4 × 10	Main shoulder lift. Seated keeps the lower back out of it. Builds the shape that fills a t-shirt.
Leg press	4 × 10–12	Main leg lift. Heavy, safe, controllable. Feet mid-platform, full range, slow eccentric.
Walking lunges or Bulgarian split squats	3 × 12 each	Single-leg work. Catches what bilateral lifts miss. Brutal but effective.

How to actually run these

Pick a weight you can do for ten clean reps with full control. Then add reps before you add weight. The body responds to tension and time, not to whether the weight on the bar impresses the guy next to you.

Watch the form first. Three minutes of YouTube per exercise. Two or three sessions with a real coach if you can afford it. Most gym injuries are ego, not bad luck.

MY TAKE

These five plus daily walking is more body than 90% of gym-goers will ever build. The system is not complicated. The doing is.

The carry-on packing list.

Carry-on first. Check the rest. Never the other way around.

Everything that matters goes in the carry-on. Everything else goes in the checked bag, and if it never arrives, the trip still works. The rule: if your carry-on is lost, you should still be able to land, get to the hotel, sleep, shower, and start your trip. Anything you need to make that happen lives in the carry-on.

ALWAYS IN THE CARRY-ON

- ☐ Passport, with at least 6 months validity from your travel date
- ☐ Wallet, with at least two cards (one Visa, one Mastercard) on separate networks
- ☐ Phone, fully charged at departure
- ☐ Noise-cancelling headphones, over-ear if budget allows
- ☐ Two power banks, at least one fully charged
- ☐ Charging cables for everything you carry. Universal adapter if going to a new region.
- ☐ Laptop or tablet if you work, in a sleeve
- ☐ Toiletries · a complete travel-size kit, not just toothbrush
- ☐ One full change of clothes (underwear, socks, t-shirt, light pants)
- ☐ Any medication you take, with original prescriptions if needed for customs
- ☐ Empty water bottle, refilled after security
- ☐ Eye mask and earplugs if flying long-haul
- ☐ Screenshot of your hotel booking and onward ticket (some countries demand proof)

The three things people always forget

Headphones, full toiletry kit, one full change of clothes. Skip any of these and a lost checked bag turns into a ruined first day.

MY TAKE

Pack what you need for tomorrow, not what you might use in two weeks. Most over-packers carry "just in case" items they never touch. Buy what you forgot at the destination. The only things you cannot easily replace are passport, prescriptions, electronics, and trust in your luggage.

The starter stack.

Five tools to start building something online from zero. Enough to begin today.

You can build almost anything with five tools and an imagination. Most people do not start because they think they need more. They do not.

Claude

MY TAKE

The Income System has the rest. The workflows, the mindset, the playbooks, and the worked example of how I built evlved.com from zero. But these five are enough to start tonight. The thing most people are missing is not another tool. It is the decision to begin.

If you do one thing.

Four artifacts. One from each system. You now have four specific things you can do this week that most people will never do.

The morning walk. The five lifts. The carry-on list. The starter stack.

If you do nothing else with this PDF, pick one and run it tomorrow. Not all four. One. The one that fits the part of your life that is currently the messiest.

Tired? Out of shape? Run the morning system. Walk every day this week.

Body has slipped? Run the five lifts. Twice this week. Just twice.

Travelling soon? Pack from the list. Notice what you stopped overpacking.

Want to build something online? Get the five tools. Sign up, even just the free tiers. Start.

If any of this lands, the full systems are at evlved.com. If you want me direct, you can book a call from the site. Otherwise, just run the one thing.

Most people will read this PDF and do nothing. Do not be most people.
